

Update From the Board

By Ron Deutschendorf
Windstar CEO and President

Dear Members,

As spring is now upon us I look forward to another year of great activity and growth for Windstar. I hope I have finally gotten caught up on my mail response to everyone who I was so late in getting their letters to. Again, I apologize for the delay and hope everyone forgives me for being slow.

I am very happy to say the 2005 Choices Symposium is coming along nicely and hope everyone realizes we do listen to your input and considerations, and implement your idea's as best we can. We are doing a 2 day event as requested, and are trying our best to accommodate everybody's suggestions. I also hope everyone has had a chance to go to the internet and see last years presentations by our speakers. They truly are wonderful and I am confident this year will be just as valuable in knowledge gained about the environment and education of how we, each "one" of us can make a difference, by implementing what we have learned/ can learn, from the presentations. For those with slow or dial-up connections write to jeff@kidzonline.org and ask for a DVD set of the symposium and he said he would make them up for you.

On another note, I was fortunate enough to spend the day chasing Amory Lovins around at the University of California-San Diego (UC-SD) where he spoke to a number of different groups on different energy topics. I always try to get where Amory is speaking as I always learn when he speaks. He is such a wealth of knowledge on energy saving related issues, etc.

Well, at the end of the day the last presentation was followed up with a round table discussion between students and faculty, (Amory was kinda along for the ride at this point, but was stuck at the table.) about "Sustainability and Education," and much to my surprise the students were very serious about complaining to the faculty about one specific subject.

The Earth Day Job's Not Done!

By Hollie Carter

Ret. Col. Al Worden, Apollo 15 Astronaut

"I have had the unique experience of seeing the Earth from afar. We have heard much of "Finite Planet Earth" and it is all too true. From space there are no boundaries and no sense of political or religious divisions. What we have here on Earth are limited resources that are finite and will one day be totally consumed. The wise use of those resources is essential to our long term survival and health. The day will come when our space program will be our safety valve to go somewhere else because we will have nothing left here to maintain our lives. Ultimately, the wise use of our planet will extend our time here, and allow us time to regenerate or substitute new energy sources for the future. Let us all think moderation in our use of energy and other resources to insure our long term survival".

Richard Murphy, Ph.D., Director, Science and Education, Ocean Futures Society

"Earth Day is very important because it reminds us all that we live on a beautiful water planet surrounded by space... we are truly an oasis in space. This special day focuses our attention on the importance of keeping our home healthy, for us, for the other species with whom we share our home and for future generations."

John Passacantando, Executive Director of Greenpeace USA

"Under this brief spell of Bush's rule, some might make the mistake that the era of ecology and environmental protection is over. But I promise you this:...our civilization will climb out of its adolescence and realize that we are all environmentalists. We and the "environment" are all one. To poison it is to poison ourselves. Until then activists will continue the fight and days like Earth Day will help us spread moments of hope beyond our own ranks."

"The job's not done!" What job? Land? Water? Air? We are responsible for every miracle we have been given on this beautiful planet. Sometime back in the 1960's, a wise man named Gaylord Nelson used his influence as a Senator to create a special day to start getting the job done. He contacted colleges, media, and schools all over the country to ask for help in making changes in our environment. Thus, the first Earth Day was born on April 22, 1970.

Fees:

This workshop is solely supported by the Foundation and is offered FREE OF REGISTRATION FEES to Windstar Global Family Members.

Curriculum:

- Complete EARTHcamp curriculum for grades 3 - 6
- Complete details for hosting Windstar's EARTHcamp: from first thoughts to final good-byes
- Nature: Up-Close activities
- Hands-on Arts and Crafts
- Ideas for Cooperative Games and Ice Breakers
- Video and Book suggestions
- Time to explore the 1000 acres of the Windstar Land Conservancy
- Nighttime activities
- Breakfast and lunch served each day

IMAGINE. . . children moving to a microphone to take advantage of an unplanned, unrehearsed opportunity to share with their families and friends the importance of caring for the Earth.

IMAGINE. . . a rainbow of children from several different ethnic backgrounds huddled around a table making blocks for the Peace Cloth.

We experienced these and many other similar events in our EARTHcamps last summer. It is easy to believe that these scenes would have made John Denver smile. We want to encourage you to consider attending the EARTHcamp Leaders Workshop this summer and making plans for holding your own EARTHcamp.

Symposium Update.....Getting to know Thomas Crum

Many of you know Tom Crum as co-founder of the Windstar Foundation. Since that time, he has founded and currently serves a president of Aiki Works, Inc, conducting workshops worldwide in his Magic of Conflict Approach. This approach turns conflict into opportunity and encourages a person to turn their life of work into a work of art.

Tom shared this article with the Foundation shortly after September 11, 2001 and we felt it a fitting re-introduction to Tom's philosophy and inspiration.

We have been shaken to the core. And yet...and yet...if we have the courage to be still, to feel and to listen within, we will discover that, underneath the rubble, the core remains vital. It is to this core, this place beyond our tears, our anger, and our fears, that we now must go. This journey to this center does not deny grief and rage but works through them -- not by acting out of the emotions, but by feeling them, by holding them as you'd hold an injured child; knowing that deep inside, at the core, the essence of life and love and healing is continually bubbling forth. Being shaken to the core is to be shaken to the source of our greatest power. It is from here that our greatest strength and our greatest contributions have emerged throughout human history. World War II is said to have created "the greatest generation." It is now our turn: We can breathe deeply and bring our awareness to center, to gain the courage and ability to let go of judgment, prejudice, and righteousness. We can walk a new path to lead humanity to higher ground. Criminals and terrorists are grown in a soil created by revenge, fear and separation. We can plant our feet in soil based on tough love and centered connection. We can make our "rescue mission" to listen actively to each other, to lend our prayers and our helping hands to others, and to seek and appreciate the gift of being together. We can be centered in the possibility of ending the cycle of violence forever. In our own actions and conversations we can help others aware that force follows force blindly, causing a never-ending cycle of suffering and revenge throughout the ages. Only when we are centered will we be guided to the most effective actions without injuring or implicating the innocent. Our greatest contribution toward humanity may be ahead of us. May we get centered and embrace it.

Board Update....continued from page 1

They wanted to know why they had to get to the end of under-graduate study, or into post-graduate study, to be able to learn anything related to Sustainability and Environmental Education!

Where are the classes, even now? And why hadn't they been taught in middle to high school, instead of getting to where they were in their College/University level education? Why wasn't this type of education available to them before they got where they were now? Especially when it is so important! Well, the faculty was going to look into making changes etc., and I wasn't allowed to speak, even though I raised my hand, and waved it around a lot. (The moderator, Lisa Shaffer, knew I wasn't involved in the school, but not who I was, or what I was involved in.)

My point in this is how we actually have this level of educated young people, upset enough to complain, to make faculty respond to something we at Windstar are already doing something about, not only for them, but for the next generation also. Educate about the Environment, Sustainability, not by teaching them at their level, but teaching them at "Ours!" Personally, I find this "Very Cool!" Go Symposium. Go Choices, Go Windstar! And to all our members, "Thanks for the Support!"

People across the country and, eventually, around the world, promised to do something about pollution. They would hold rallies, write to Legislators, clean highways and streams, and even create Earth Day artwork for the health of the planet. We learned that we have choices to make everyday. Teachers use Earth Day to teach about living things and how humans can make a positive or negative impact. We still "celebrate" Earth Day today, but does it hold the same meaning?

Last September, Windstar's "New Choices for Your Future" Symposium brought together some of the most contemporary minds in the environmental world. I began this article with the Earth Day thoughts of 3 of those speakers and their view on the impact it has, or should have, in today's world.

In the spring of 1989, John Denver wrote an article for the Windstar Journal entitled "Leadership...Simply Following Nature." This excerpt highlights the significance of those words when thinking about the "job" we must continue to do on Earth Day and everyday. "So much of who we are and what is possible in each of us as human beings is not known by any of us. Who can imagine a butterfly coming out of a caterpillar? In truly being oneself, this evolution, this change, becomes a natural process. The way we consciously move in that direction is to give ourselves purpose and to act out of the highest sense of purpose that we can imagine in everything we do - to have that purpose show up in everything that we do..... This is a time - almost more than at any other period in history - for each individual all over the planet to play a leadership role."

Will we follow the inspiration of the ones who paved the way to make Earth Day an important day of our year? Will our purpose for acknowledging the day create conversation and make others stop and think? Windstar was created to teach this concept. You are a part of Windstar and you have the energy to keep Earth Day a part of your community!

Radical Recycling With No Regret

by Carolyn Churchill

Like you, I strive to be a conscientious and thorough recycling individual. But there have been times when recycling has gotten the best of me. You know how it's drilled into us about separating paper from plastic and aluminum from glass and so on? Well, one of my very first experiences with radical recycling had me attempting to do just that. As it happened, the plastic in question was a blue ring around the neck of a glass bottle. One overzealous pass with a big kitchen knife later and I was in the emergency room having my palm stitched back together. But, hey, I got the plastic separated from the glass!

If you've ever bent down outside to pick up a discarded milk jug in the dead of winter, found it half frozen into a snow bank, but desired to recycle it so badly that you gave it a yank and landed on your butt, then you TOO might be a radical recycler. My family likes to tease me about my frequent forays into the garbage muttering under my breath "Don't you people know this pop bottle can be recycled and this toilet paper roll can too!" Opening junk mail is an art project for me. As I prepare it for recycling, I tear out all the personal information and in the process create this little sculpture of shredded paper that, at times, resembles Aspen mountain.

Every holiday season I'm hit with the BIG dilemma. To send or not to send ... cards. It's not the time required to prepare the cards that causes my indecision, it's the fear of creating paper waste through my desire to spread some holiday cheer. So I compromise, I send cards every other year and recycle all the ones that I receive. It happened the same way with raising babies - the indecision between cloth or disposable diapers. Thankfully, I didn't have much trouble with that one and went with cloth diapers all the way. It made for some bulky babies, but, they certainly had bunches of extra padding for when they fell down!

My sons have learned from my example over the years, almost too well at times, especially when it comes to electricity. I'll be sitting at the computer when stealthily, a teenage hand reaches in and flips off all the lights in the family room. Or, I'll leave the kitchen for just a second, to run some laundry up the stairs, and return to a darkened room. I suspect my boys enjoy keeping mom in the dark just a little bit too much these days, don't you?

Radical recycling hits where and when you least expect it. My brother recently shared with me a story of how he almost lost his life while attempting to recycle a coat. You see, the coat was wedged into a crevasse on the side of El Capitán, a steep rock face in Yosemite National Park. My brother spied the coat, along with other garbage that had collected, while ascending the mountain. After some fancy and daring climbing maneuvers, he rescued the coat and the garbage and thankfully stayed on the rope as well.

Over the years, I've given recycling my best shot and had a few laughs plus some awkward moments while doing it. (Such as scurrying down the driveway in my jammies and mocs, with my hair flying wildly, carrying an overloaded recycling bin just as the truck was pulling up!) Through it all, however, I live with no regret of my radical recycling ways. Especially when I read positive facts such as these that suggest we really are making a difference.

- According to EPA estimates, aluminum cans now account for less than 1% of the total U.S. waste stream because so many of them are being recycled.
- In 1993, U.S. paper recovery saved more than 90,000,000 cubic yards of landfill space and nearly 36,000,000 tons of paper were recovered --twice as much as in 1980.
- Using recycled glass results in 20% less air pollution and 50% less water pollution than when a new bottle is made from raw materials.
- Recycling plastic saves twice as much energy as burning it in an incinerator.
- And speaking of diapers, a cloth diaper washed at home costs 3¢ per use. A disposable diaper costs 22¢ per use. The difference can really add up since a typical baby will use about 10,000 diapers.

But my favorite fact has to be this one:

- More than 20,000,000 Hershey's Kisses are wrapped each day, using 133 square miles of tinfoil. All that foil is recyclable!

Care to join me in some radial recycling by way of chocolate??

As many of you already know, we're welcoming two new Connection Coordinators to the Program, Barbara Davis and Cindi Martin. I feel honored to be working with them both.

Meet Barbara Davis – Connections Coordinator

Pure magic begins to flow as musicians combine their individual talents to perform a symphonic masterpiece. In so many ways Windstar is like a symphony orchestra, with people from all over the world bringing their gifts, energies, and spirits together to create a peaceful and sustainable future. Through the Connections Program, these people can be instruments of change in their own communities.

John Denver left a wonderful legacy in Windstar. I truly believe that the solution to the Earth's problems lies in the Windstar philosophy of respect for self, others, and the planet. So many things need to be done. We need each other; we are all in this together. No one instrument or musician can perform a symphony alone. I am excited to have the opportunity to provide support for the Connection groups as they go about their work, and it is with honor and pleasure that I accept the position of Co-Coordinator of the Connections Program.

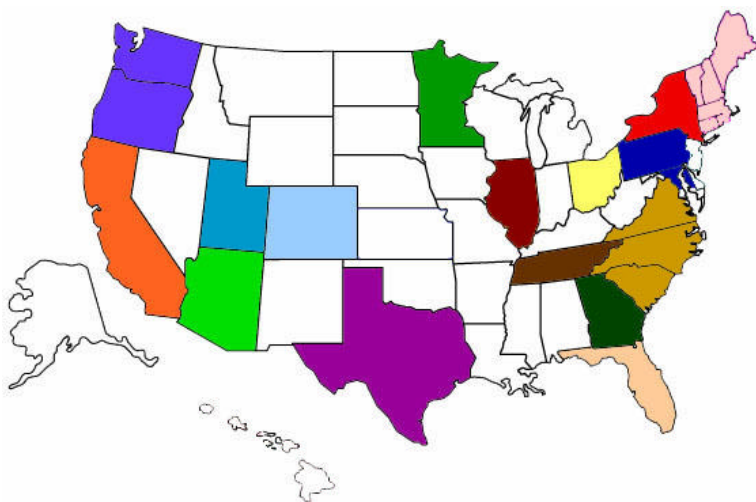

Barbara Davis

Meet Cindi Martin – Connections Coordinator

In late 2000, Windstar magically found me. She opened my eyes to the fact that my personal beliefs align so strongly with others. You see, at that time in Arizona I had not yet found others who shared the idea that we as individuals can make a difference, that it is as simple as a choice, that we are all connected with all things here on this Earth. Windstar made me, and continues to make me, feel at home. I have since learned how to take my "home" with me wherever I go, and wherever I go I share the simple beauty of what Windstar offers the world. It is one of my strongest desires to hold this space, whether here in Arizona or on the Windstar land in Snowmass, so that others may also find home, so that they, too, will know that they are not alone in this mission to create a peaceful and sustainable environment. It is my true honor to be offered the position as Co-Coordinator for the Connections Program. With excitement, I accept and look forward to assisting in the many facets of this role.

Cindi Martin "Cottonwood Stone"

In order for the Program to work effectively, Deb, Barbara and Cindi will each be a liaison with specific Connection Groups. This is the break out:

Barbara: Colorado Windstar, Peaceful Spirit, Arizona Connection, Bluebonnet Connection, Canada Connection, EARTHcamp Liaison

Cindi: New York, New England, Heart of Ohio, Florida Connection, Foxfire Connection, Windstar Mid-South, Minnesota, Spirit Connection, Chicago Connection

Deb: Pacific Northwest Connection, California Connection, Wasatch Mountain Connection, Windstar Australia Connection, John Denver Peace Cloth Connection

The mission statement of Windstar Connection Groups:

To inspire and support Windstar members to participate in action projects that contribute to creating a peaceful, healthy and sustainable future.

Please feel free to contact us if you have any questions, ideas or if there is anything we can do to assist you in any way.

Connection Highlights

California Windstar Connection

By Bill Templin

The California Windstar Connection was re-founded in the Spring of 2003. Our first activity was to create a free website at <http://groups.msn.com/CAWindstarConnection/>. This website has allowed us to begin communicating with other Windstar members who are interested in "Thinking Globally and Working Locally" on a variety of activities that will help us improve our living conditions.

In our first 2 years, we have participated in:

- Creek Week activities organized by the Sacramento Urban Creeks Council (www.sacto-ucc.org/),
- National River Clean Up activities organized by Friends of the South Fork Kings River (<http://sfkingsriver.org>),
- Several home concerts in tribute to John Denver and his music, and
- Our first of annual "Dancing With The Mountains" tributes to John up at South Lake Tahoe in cooperation with the Tahoe Valley RV Resort.

We are planning to be involved with these same activities each year. My new position frequently takes me into Sierra Nevada communities (<http://arwg.org>) and provides many more opportunities for community involvement for Windstar and the CA Windstar Connection. We are asking our members to do similar things throughout California that we have begun to do in the Sacramento area and let us know when they are participating in events in which more of us might also like to take part.

Arizona Windstar Connection

By Cottonwood Stone

The Arizona Windstar Connection's 2005 activities started off by presenting the John Denver Peace Cloth at the Humanity Rocks Gala Benefit Concert. We were given the entire space just outside the main entrance of the concert hall to display the Peace Cloth along with information about both the Windstar Foundation and the Arizona Windstar Connection. We made some wonderful connections with other like-minded organization, including the StarShine Academy. Merlin Yockstick, Chairman of Blue Planet Village, was very touched to see the Peace Cloth and to learn that after all these years, Windstar is still in motion. Merlin was involved with Windstar back in its infant stages. The benefit concert featured Cassandra Delaney Denver and her band, The Darlings. We were touched with Cassandra's warmth and charm while visiting with her before and after the concert. Her music and voice danced with enchantment throughout the concert hall.

Coming up this spring, Arizona Windstar Connection will participate in the Sun Festival in Scottsdale, the 6th Annual "What One Can Do" Earth Day Music Festival in Phoenix, and with the "John Denver – A Vision of Peace" peace pole dedication ceremony at the Grand Canyon.

Spotlight on Bluebonnet

By Barbara Davis

In recognition of the great need for healing in our world, the Bluebonnet Connection has declared 2005 a "Healing Time." This theme will be incorporated into all of our meetings and activities for the year as we seek ways to become a healing presence in our community and for our Earth.

Plans for EARTHcamp 2005 are well underway. We are again working with the Fort Worth Botanical Society to present an EARTHcamp in the beautiful Fort Worth Botanic Garden during the week of June 13-17.

We have completed our first afghan for the Warm Up America! Foundation and anticipate completing more in this ongoing project. We are also in the process of making plans for our Earth Day event in Dallas.

Australia Connection

By Genie Platsis

The Australia Connection of Windstar is currently working on a square for the John Denver Memorial Peace Cloth. The center is an eagle, members are putting their creative pieces together, and it will be sent to be added to the Peace Cloth in the next few months. Look for pictures on the website (www.windstaraustraliaconnection.com/)

March 6th is Clean Up Australia Day. Windstar has reserved an area to clean up along the roadway. If you are living in the Brisbane area, come join us! Help us to get the Windstar name out to Australia. You need not be a member of Windstar to come help spread John Denver's Windstar mission! More info can be found at: www.cleanup.com.au/ There has been some discussion of a clean up site being reserved for Melbourne, but details have not been announced as of this printing.

The Australia Connection is planning another meeting in June in Melbourne. Also a second event is planned for Tree Day on July 31st all round Australia. Windstar Australia Connection will be registering their sites in March. Come join us! Again, you need not be a member of Windstar to help us plant trees! For more info, go to www.planetark.com/campaignspage.cfm/newsid/3/story.htm

If anyone living in Australia would like to become a member of the Australia Connection, you must first be a global member of Windstar (www.wstar.org) for $35 USD, then membership to the Connection is free. For more information, email: info@windstaraustraliaconnection.com or visit the website www.windstaraustraliaconnection.com/.

Writers Wanted...
By Michele Philips

I am sure that by now, many of you have noticed that we have some new names appearing as writers of the articles here in the Vision. I am very pleased and excited that the call we have put out to the membership asking for their help in writing has been so well answered. With the inception of the Skills Roster, many people expressed a desire to help wherever necessary, and although they may not have listed one of their talents as a writer; they have stepped up to the challenge in wonderful and entertaining ways.

I would like to extend the invitation for this opportunity to all of you. I know many people have read pieces and thought to themselves, "I can do that", or had ideas for topics for the Vision, and now is your chance to let us know you are out there. If you have not signed up for the Skill Roster yet, please go to the Windstar site and click on the link to sign up. The information is completely confidential, no personal information is passed on or given out to anyone. The members of the Windstar Advisory Board are the only ones with access to the information, so that when they are looking for help on various projects, they have the database to work from.

We are always interested in what our membership has to say, what they are thinking, what their perspectives are on the world today. By signing up for the Skills Roster, you can be recognized for what you can do to help us help the world. Please, take the time today to sign up if you haven't, and don't be surprised if I contact you and ask you to write an article to be in an upcoming issue of the Vision.
